

Homeland: it's such a mysterious place...

I always wanted to travel around the world, the only idea of meeting another countries, another cultures, another people, another environment, makes me think about what little things we are. Recently, we had the great opportunity to make this dream come true, because until this moment, I've never travelled abroad, and we travelled together to such mysterious places... The cold and classical Belgium and the colorful Netherlands.

What lovely places... They're very big countries and cities with a lot of different places, environment and cultures as I said before. I only hope that all of my thoughts, all the moments of the trip will stay on my mind forever. I have never thought that in one week, I would be able to see so many beautiful landscapes, different moments that I'll keep in my mind, a smile comes to my face, happiness invades me every time I think about those moments together.

Happy of being out there, at the top of the mountain; happy of walking along the streets, happy of eating Belgian chocolates, or the different types of cheese, happy of discovering such mysterious places.

I always wanted to travel around the world, and this time we made it possible. I would share with you thousands of experiences, but I won't, I will keep all of these moments on my mind forever.

But there are such mysterious places out there that I only want to get lost in all of them. To get lost... To discover what is it that makes each country "unique". To discover every corner of the world. I don't know who I am going to be in a few years time, not even where I'm going to be, but I really hope that I'll be at least with my people, with my family, and with the person who will make me happy.

I will fight for my dreams, and I will fight for discovering each mysterious corner of the world. I will lose myself in every country. And I will remember each moment that I lived in Brussels, in Gent, in Volendam, in Amsterdam... and also in this place, Tenerife, where I have learnt many things that I know nowadays. I will keep focus on having this idea always in my dreams.
